I. Introductory Summary

The Reference Department continues to refine its services and research results to better meet faculty and student requirements. The librarians estimate that they undertook 1,200 student and faculty questions of a substantial nature during 2007-2008. Associate Director Beth Edinger completed her first full year on the staff and has already made some significant changes. Chiefly among them has been developing more student centric library services such as introducing “live chat reference assistance” and creating a more welcoming atmosphere by installing a plainly visible patron reference desk.

This was also the year that Steve Young “took to the road” by teaching in the American Law Program in Cracow, Poland. In addition, the Public Services’ staff actively participated in drafting various documents required for the American Bar Association accreditation visit scheduled for March 8-11, 2009. In particular, Young, working with Director Margeton, spearheaded the Strategic Planning Process, while Edinger led the group working on the library’s Mission Statement.

The Circulation Department, always eager to respond to faculty and student requests, borrowed 520 items for faculty and students through interlibrary loan. The staff also lent some 417 books and journals to outside libraries and local law firms. The library’s in-house statistics reveal that some 10,258 books and periodicals were charged out at the circulation counter during the year. The Department also completed its first year of encouraging students and faculty to use MyColumbo software that permits patrons to manage their own library accounts. By all reports the system has been very successful. Head of Access Services librarian, Frances Brillantine, graciously accepted the responsibility of co-chairing (with Cataloger, Emily Evans) the team that oversaw the drafting of the library’s Questionnaire and Self-Study Narrative required for the American Bar Association accreditation process.

The Technical Services Department continued its important role in reviewing all continuing library subscriptions and making recommendations for eliminating services that were appropriate. The staff implemented Millennium WebPac Pro software to make searching and presenting online catalog results more useful. The staff is pleased to report that 21,300 electronic titles, known as Making of Modern American Law collection, were added to Columbo as was cataloging for these and other electronic titles. In addition, Associate Director and Head of Technical Services, Mary Strouse, lead a team that completely revised the Collection Development Manual, a task last undertaken in detail in 2005, and also a requirement preceding the site inspection.

Len Davidson, the Systems Librarian, continued to upgrade library equipment where necessary, and he replaced several computers in classroom podiums. A major project for the year was reconfiguring the large library computer lab (room 318) into space usable for traditional classes and lab use. Although the work was postponed until the next academic year, the groundwork was completed by summer 2008.

Media Services Director, Greg Stack, concentrated on instructing more faculty on the use of classroom technology. He also contracted for the podium hardware and software necessary for the computer lab makeover, which essentially copied technology installed in other classrooms. Because of the increase in faculty requests for recording and webcasting, Media Service staff also logged many hours in the Byron Auditorium and Slowinski Courtroom supporting special events.

III. Services

A. Public Services — Reference Department

1. Reference Staff and Student Interaction

Beth Edinger completed her first full-year as Associate Director and Head of Public Services. She quickly went about evaluating the library services and made many useful suggestions for improving services and the physical layout. Among the most successful changes was the reconfiguration of the reference area by adding a new “walkup” reference desk. The new desk appears to have removed the students’ psychological barrier with regard to approaching the librarians for research help. The desk setup has resulted in substantially more student/staff interaction. “Live chat” reference service has also been initiated, however, this service is catching slowly and will need some time to germinate.

2. Reference Staff Contribution to the Self-Study Process

A considerable amount of reference staff time was taken up with preparing the many documents and studies that were necessary to prepare for the American Bar Association accreditation visit scheduled for March 2009. Among the requirements is updating the Collection Development Manual, last significantly revised in 2005. The process began in spring 2007 and was completed by May 2008. Just about every section of the manual was visited with particular attention to ensuring that rules reflect actual practices. At this time, the foreign law section also was revised substantially.

Beth Edinger spearheaded the drafting of the library mission statement during the fall with Frances Brillantine and Mary Strouse. The reference staff also contributed to the site inspection questionnaire and narrative self-study throughout the year-long drafting process.

Steve Young partnered with the Library Director in leading the entire staff in the strategic planning process. This work was kicked off with a planning luncheon and brainstorm session in early December 2007 where staff was encouraged to brainstorm at a series of group sessions. Throughout the winter/spring the leaders followed typical strategic planning routines that included an environmental study, sought out additional ideas and comments, and collapsed the numerous staff suggestions in three main goals – to provide a consistent, high quality level of service – to promote responsible stewardship – and to support an environment conducive to staff development. The planning process was completed in July with a plan appraisal luncheon. The complete strategic plan is included as Appendix A.

3. Reference and Research

During academic year 2007-2008 faculty liaison teams were again reshuffled to accommodate faculty preferences and balance out the amount of work each librarian received. The staff estimates that they worked on approximately 1,200 reference and research requests of a substantial nature. As in the past, some were quick projects; others more complicated and time consuming. A list of sample representative questions follows:
Which MLB players have admitted using steroids?

Which ABA ethics rules govern bartering for legal services?

Can a U.S. Air Force Reservist hold a Vatican passport?

Where can I find a summary of the Supreme Court’s tax cases?

What has been written about piercing the corporate veil in international law?

Which proposed federal rules amendments have been rejected by Congress?

What are the party affiliations of the 50 state legislatures?

4. Teaching

The reference staff continued to make themselves available for special subject lectures in the classroom at the request of faculty. A list of the lecture topics can be found at the end of the report under each librarian’s name. The fall lectures included a session with law review staffs (how to use the library for cite checking) and library overview lectures for the incoming first-year students. Steve Young also taught American legal research to students of the Jagiellonian University through the American Law Program in Cracow Poland.

5. Addition of New Electronic Titles to the Library Catalog

In May 2008 the library purchased Making of Modern American Law, a collection of 21,300 electronic books covering the American legal scene from 1800 to 1920. Along with access to these fully searchable, electronic volumes, cataloging records were downloaded into Columbo, significantly increasing the number of cataloging records in the system. Each of these books can be accessed through the online catalog and also through the database list at the library’s webpage.

B. Public Services — Circulation Department

1. Circulation Staffing

There were no changes to the Circulation staff during the academic year. However, Graduate Pre-Professional Christine McMahon graduated from the School of Library and Information Science in July 2008 and the hiring process to replace her began during the summer.

2. Circulation Activity

During academic year 2007-2008 the staff circulated some 10,258 books and journals within the law school community. Interlibrary loan activity with other institutions included the borrowing of 520 items for faculty and students, and the lending of 714 items to outside institutions, many of whom are Washington, D.C. academic law libraries and local area law firms.

3. Use of Online Library Request Form

   After a full year of permitting students and faculty to request items from other libraries on a new electronic request form, the staff reports that the Millennium software is working very well and most borrowing requests now are transmitted to the librarians using the new system.

4. Online Study Room Reservation System

   The recently developed online student study room reservation system worked flawlessly for the year, relieving staff of the burden of recording and reserving each of six study rooms throughout the year. The system permits students to reserve a study room anytime, day or night, from any computer with Internet access.

5. Security

   In effort to beef up security in the library, carrel locking docks were installed in 2007 to secure laptops in the library. Thirty security cables are available at the circulation desk. During academic year 2007-2008 the laptop security cables were charged out at the circulation desk 2,330 times.

6. Surveys

   The biennial Student Survey and Faculty Survey were undertaken in March 2008. A brief report on the results of the Student Survey is in Appendix B.

7. Law School/Library Displays

   A highlight in the University year was the visit of Pope Benedict XVI to campus in April 2007. Frances Brillantine developed several beautiful and informative displays for the atrium wall cases to celebrate the Pope’s visit. Steve Young also prepared a library display entitled 1908-2008: Celebrating One Hundred Years of the Canons of Legal Ethics commemorating 100 years of evolving codes of legal ethics, culminating in today’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct.

8. Law Library Self-Study

   Head of Access Services, Frances Brillantine, and Cataloger, Emily Evans, prepared and co-edited materials for both the American Bar Association site visit Questionnaire and the library Self-Study Narrative. They were assisted by library staff members and worked with Professor Geoff Watson, the coordinator/drafter of the law school’s responses; the work was completed on time and within the allotted page count. Ms. Brillantine also assisted with drafting of the mission statement and revising the Collection Development Manual.
C. Technical Services Department

D. Systems Librarian and Automation Services

1. Staffing

Director Len Davidson was successful in hiring more students to work evenings and weekends during the academic year. He helped with Media Services Department requests during the absence of Director Greg Stack in the spring. Davidson also enlisted the assistance of staff member Philip Venable to remove and replace equipment throughout the year.
2. Hardware and Software Upgrades

The Systems Librarian coordinated the purchase and/or installation of the following equipment and software during academic year 2007-2008:

- Instructor PCs at podiums in classrooms 211, 303, 305
- Duplex printing for students on all floors
- “Chat” software in the Reference Area
- Software for Reference Advising Reservation System
- HP 8150DN laptop printer for students
- Three new staff PCs
- “Widgets” software to make searching the Online Catalog easier
- Scanner for the Circulation Department
- Kurzweil equipment (upgraded)
- Designed library vacation calendaring system software
- HP 4000 (donated) in Technical Services Department

3. Web Access

As a result of the law school’s migration to a new webpage format the library staff undertook a review of the library’s webpages. Davidson, Strouse, Brillantine and Edinger made some minor suggestions to revise the “look,” but for the part kept the changes minimal. Statistics on how many times the various library webpages have been accessed can be found at Appendix C.

4. Reconfigure Large Computer Lab 318 into Shared Classroom

During spring semester 2008 Davidson spearheaded the team that began planning to reconfigure the large computer lab (room 318) into a classroom that could be scheduled for both law school classes and computer instruction. The change-over envisioned removing built-in counters and installing 21 individual workstations with LCD monitors mounted under glass desktops.

E. Media Services Department

1. Staffing

The two Media Services Department staff members responded to 548 requests. During March and April, Media Coordinator David Luce manned the office alone (with the help of Len Davidson) because Director Greg Stack experienced a family emergency. In the Media Director’s absence, the University’s Center for Planning and Technology also helped coordinate several webcasts, including a major conference that examined the jurisprudence of Justice Sandra Day O’Connor. The O’Connor program included a teleconference presentation from the keynote speaker. Media Services Department statistics can be found at Appendix D.
2. Equipment

There were few major equipment purchases during academic year 2007-2008. However, Director Stack did buy a small computer configured as a portable encoding station that can easily be wheeled to venues for digital recording/encoding and simultaneous transmission over the Internet. In addition, the staff purchased a second digital camera, as well as LCD televisions and combination VCR/DVD players for use in two former telephone booths that were converted to video viewing stations.

3. Bar Preparation and Academic Excellence Initiatives

Media Services continued to support both the Bar Preparation and Academic Excellence initiatives by working weekends and evenings recording programs designed by faculty to prepare students for both academic achievement in law school and success when taking their state bar exams. Many of these programs are media intensive, and all require video recording, digital encoding and relatively quick web accessibility.

4. Outfitting New Classroom 318

The Media Services Department, working with vendor RTZ, designed the smart podiums, which would include all the same technology incorporated in the major classrooms. Although the work was scheduled for the summer, the project was postponed until late fall 2008.

5. Faculty Training and New Lifeline

The results of the bi-annual Faculty Survey undertaken by the library staff in March 2008 indicated a preference for more faculty training in using classroom technology, and a desire to have some easier method of contacting Stack, Luce or student assistants for immediate assistance in the classroom. In response, staff members Stack, Luce and Davidson offered individual training sessions throughout May and June to faculty interested in learning more about classroom systems, or simply wishing to hone their skills.

In order to provide quick Media staff assistance when needed, 16 telephones were installed in classrooms, courtrooms, and seminar rooms along with emergency telephone numbers.

DuFour Law Library Student Survey — Appendix B

From January 25th through February 11th 2008, the DuFour Law Library conducted a survey to determine how the law students perceive library services and facilities. A total of 271 students participated in the survey, over 30% of the total law school population. 33% of the law school’s day students completed the survey, while 24% of evening students completed the survey.

The survey measured three general areas:
1. Library service
2. Library collection and web page
3. Library facilities

Overall we are pleased to report that in almost all categories the students rated library services either excellent or very good. The library’s print and online collections together with the Library webpage also received high ratings. Pertaining to the library collection and webpage, students appear to want further instruction in the resources that are available. The majority of students rated the library facilities as comfortable and conducive to studying; however, the issues of temperature (too cold) and noise (too loud) surfaced in the respondents’ comments. In addition, a number of both day and evening students raised issues regarding laptop printing.

The survey was illuminating in showing the library how it is perceived by our student patrons, and provides a roadmap for future improvements and strategic planning.
